

AT BETHANY COLLEGE.

The Fifty-first Annual Commencement Exercises.

THE LARGEST CLASS GRADUATED

In the History of this Institution of Learning—Interesting Exercises of the Week—The Town Overrun with People and a Large Attendance at the Commencement.

The grand old college of Bethany celebrated its fifty-first annual commencement exercises yesterday, and for the whole of the week preceding the sleepy little village at the foot of the hill has been in its annual turmoil of bustle and agitation. The village itself and the whole surrounding country-side is proud of Alexander Campbell's legacy to learning, and annually the inhabitants from far and near turn out to do honor to the closing exercises of the college, and the graduates who are about to leave the sheltering walls of their alma mater. During the entire week the village was full of strangers. The weather has been beautiful and the natural beauties of the surrounding country have been at their best. Nineteen graduates, the largest number ever turned out at one commencement in the history of the college, got their diplomas. Their parents and friends alone made up a goodly number, sufficient to tax the capacity of the hotel, and with the influx of all the friends of the institution, the campus presented a lively and animated scene, especially yesterday, the closing day.

When the examinations were concluded last week, and the grades of those examined fixed, fully two-thirds of the pupils left for home, only the graduates and a few others remaining over. Though the grounds were well dotted yesterday morning with groups of people, enjoying the shade of the fine trees, and listening to the strains of Meister's band, the inspiring yells of the college boys were missed. The graduates, as befitting those about to be launched forth into the world, were sedate and quiet, and considered it beneath their dignity to show the school-boy boisterousness.

For an hour before the time for the commencement exercises—arrived, Meister's band occupied Pendleton Heights, and there entertained the graduates with music. At 10 o'clock

THE BAND STARTED DOWN the hill, to the tune of "Trump, Trump, Trump, the Boys are Marching." In advance of the graduates. As soon as the band and the graduates had entered Commencement hall, the people rapidly followed and were soon seated, with the assistance of the ushers, Messrs. J. T. Handley, B. L. Kershner, W. C. Frewitt, K. S. Woolery, W. H. Billingsley, W. H. Brandenburg, T. F. Lewis and J. J. White.

The nineteen graduates took their seats on the stage, and behind them was a row of the alumni of the institution. President McDiarmid sat on the left of the stage, and near him sat Prof. W. K. Pendleton, ex-president of the college and the sole surviving member of the first faculty. He had come 1,200 miles, from Euclid, Florida. Dr. C. F. Ulrich, of Wheeling, also occupied a seat on the platform. The front of the stage was a solid mass of ferns, green and roses, the fragrance of the latter being perceptible over nearly the whole of the large hall. Over the stage were suspended festoons of intertwined greens and flowers, and over all hung the motto of the class of 1892: Resipere Phœni—Look to the end. For those who were just about to go forth to test the strength of their education and training, the motto was most appropriate.

The hall was filled clear back to the doors, and it was said that never before had so much interest been taken in the exercises, barring those of last, the jubilee year.

THE COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES. The commencement exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. Mr. Moffatt, of Piedmont, Ohio. After music by the band Miss L. Etta Rannells, of Ohio, delivered the salutatory. She described the sensations of the alumni, who visit their alma mater, with feelings of joy, not unmixed with sadness at finding that many old friends and schoolmates are missing. She bade them welcome, and welcomed all those who had come to old Bethany. Their welcome they could read over every door of the old institution.

Oregon E. Scott, of Pennsylvania, delivered a Greek oration, entitled: "Athens in comparison with Sparta." The sonorous ancient language certainly was Greek to all but a few of the audience, but Mr. Scott's delivery was so good, and he seemed to understand his subject so thoroughly, that he was loudly applauded.

The Latin oration, "Non Paratus"—not prepared—was the theme of Mr. C. W. Jopson, of California, and as the language in which Cicero moved the hearts and minds of the old Romans fell from his lips, even those who understood not were delighted.

"Asleep" was the title of an oration by Mr. Horace F. Blackwell, of Missouri. He compared some of the young men of to-day to a youth lying asleep in a beautiful temple, filled with objects of beauty and art and surrounded by all loveliness of nature. To remain idle, in this age of stir and scientific research he characterized as an unpardonable fault, and in burning words he called on the youth of the land to be wide awake and energetic, and continue in the line of Anglo Saxon deed and thought. Mr. Blackwell was vigorously applauded, his eloquent and poetical speech having pleased the audience well.

George Darsie, jr., of Pennsylvania, delivered an essay on Grecian and Jewish ideas. The ideas of the Greeks, he said, in literature and art, all tended toward the beautiful. The cultivation of the imagination and intellect among them, yet though producing the greatest poets, the most eloquent orators and the profoundest philosophers, the moral and religious side of man received no attention. In contradistinction to these ideas were those of the ancient Jews. The moral and religious side of man was cultivated with them. They did not revere the memories of those who were celebrated for works of genius, as they did those who had gained triumphant victories by faith, such as Gideon and other heroes.

THE INFLUENCE OF ATHENS, the orator continued, was still paramount to this day, in art and in literature, but the highest type that manhood can aspire to was contained and was still to be found in the Jewish ideals. As tending to the greater glory of God and the moral and religious welfare of man, their ideas were the highest type to which the aspirations of man could rise. "Germany's contribution to civilization" was an oration contributed by Mr. J. H. Miller, of Ohio. Germany's contribution to civilization had been a most potent one, the orator said. Home was with the ancient Germans the idea most honored. The marriage-vows seldom were broken. Crime they would not tolerate. Scars were more honorable than jewels, and bravery was the quality of mind and body most admired. The old German despised slavery, and fought bravely to prevent their subjugation by more powerful nations. The German home idea and love for liberty were Germany's contribution to civilization.

After the applause following Mr. Miller's oration had subsided, Mr. W. W. Winbigler, of Ohio, delivered an oration on "Russia's Need." The orator gave a vivid description of the horrible condition of the Russian peasantry in their lives of squalid degradation. To ameliorate this condition, to spread education, to disseminate knowledge, a change in the form of government was necessary. A modern democracy was Russia's need and her only salvation.

Mr. C. B. Davis, of Ohio, the eloquent valedictorian of his class, in the farewell oration thoroughly justified the selection that had been made. "There are times," said he, "when the falling voice cannot utter the feelings of the soul, when the moistened eye is more eloquent than the silver words of a gifted bard, when heart speaks to heart, though the lips be silent. It is such a time when some friend, near and dear, puts on immortality for this mortal, and passes beyond life's horizon; it is even such a time, when we are about to leave scenes, which have WITNESSED OUR JOYS AND SORROWS; scenes that must be forever united in memory with the gladdens of some ambitions realized, the sadness of some dreams disappointed. We are stirred within, but can give only a feeble utterance, for there is really no language of the emotions." We read on the human face what never is read on the printed page—in a quivering lip, perhaps more a betrayed than a word expresses. Words are cold, lifeless, inadequate. There are heights and depths they never attain. There are bounding and aching hearts they never know. Oh, how much we feel that cannot be expressed! How vainly we long for words into which has been breathed the breath of life, and yet we struggle, and naturally, too, to use them.

To-day marked an epoch in the lives of himself and classmates, the valedictorian continued; a beginning and an ending; a beginning of a new life of labor, and an ending of a time of dreaming and of castle building. After recalling the joys of college life, the speaker alluded touchingly to those who had died during the term.

To the inhabitants of Bethany, for their unvarying kind treatment of himself and classmates, the valedictorian gave thanks; to the members of the faculty and to President McDiarmid he expressed deep gratitude for their fostering care and kindness and patience shown during four years. "That peace and prosperity may forever dwell within thy walls, O Bethany," the valedictorian concluded, "and the deeds of thy sons and daughters redound to thy honor and glory, is the last fond wish of the class of '92."

Mr. Davis's valedictory address was pleasingly delivered, and a solid round of applause greeted his farewell to Bethany.

THE CONFERRING OF DEGREES. To the young men and women who had spent several years preparing themselves for this occasion, the most interesting part of the exercises was to come. After music by the band, President McDiarmid announced the following as having graduated:

L. N. Aldrich, Indiana; Horace F. Blackwell, Missouri; Ernest S. Clarke, Kentucky; M. E. Chatley, Pennsylvania; C. B. Davis, Ohio; George Darsie, jr., Pennsylvania; Barnes Gillespie, Virginia; H. B. Gans, Pennsylvania; William T. Groom, Kentucky; W. H. Hanna, Pennsylvania; C. W. Jopson, California; Emma A. Lyon, Pennsylvania; J. H. Miller, Ohio; L. Etta Rannells, Ohio; May E. Shupe, Ohio; Oregon E. Scott, Pennsylvania; Raymond G. Scott, Pennsylvania; Anna L. Cox, West Virginia, and W. W. Winbigler, Ohio.

Of the above graduates Messrs. Aldrich, Blackwell, Clarke, Chatley, Davis, Darsie, Gillespie, Groom, Hanna, Jopson, Miller, Oregon and Raymond Scott, Winbigler and Miss Anna E. Cox, a post-graduate, received the degree of bachelor of arts. Mr. H. B. Gans received the degree of bachelor of science. Misses Emma A. Lyon, L. Etta Rannells and May E. Shupe received the degree of bachelor of philosophy. Mr. Oregon Scott carried off first honors in the classical course, Mr. C. W. Jopson second honors and Mr. Raymond G. Scott third honors. Mr. Gillespie's diploma was awarded cum laude, (with praise), Messrs. Blackwell's and Chatley's magna cum laude, (with much praise), and those of Messrs. Oregon and Raymond Scott and Misses Rannells and Shupe summa cum laude, (with the highest praise).

After the conferring of degrees Prof. W. K. Pendleton made a few remarks. He said that he was the only surviving member of the first faculty of the college, and that he had come 1,200 miles to witness the exercises. He was gratified at the zeal the trustees had shown; he was gratified by the increase of the endowment fund and by the assurance of the treasurer that things never before

HAD LOOKED SO HOPEFUL. As they did at present. Though in the last few years the institution had passed through some changes, they were changes that had brought it greater confidence and greater influence.

He expressed a confident hopefulness in the ever increasing prosperity of the college. He had faith in her when there was no endowment, he had faith in her when the endowment was small, and he had found that in the dark days there had always been a current of downflow, provided by the friends of the institution. He expressed himself as pleased with the industry and talent shown by the graduates, and hoped that the college would continue in a career of prosperity, in the turning out of good men and women.

During the exercises Meister's orchestra, which was stationed in the gallery, played the following selections: "Signal" march, overture to "William Tell," "Silver Bell" overture, "From Lefty Alps to Silent Dale" overture, selection from "Wang," "Encouragement" overture, "Loona" overture and "Spring Greeting" march.

As a quarter to one o'clock the commencement exercises were over, and the graduates, professors and alumni adjourned to dinner. It was the last meal that many of them would eat within the boundaries of the alma mater, and many reminiscences were exchanged. The joy naturally felt at what might be deemed a relief from the irksome labors of the school days was not unmixed with sadness at the approaching separation of old schoolmates and chums.

THE ALUMNI MEETING. The meeting of the Alumni was called for three o'clock, in Chapel hall. At the hour appointed some twenty alumni gathered in the hall, and Mr. J. G. Palmer, of Wallburg, was elected chairman. Some speeches in the nature of recollections and reminiscences of by-gone years, were indulged in. Dr. C. F. Ulrich, of Wheeling, a member of the second class graduated from Bethany, made a speech, which was listened to with delight by his brother alumni and alumnae. Prof. Blanpied, Prof. Dowling and the venerable Professor Pendleton, also gave interesting talks. A committee was appointed to make arrangements for the alumni meeting to be held at the next commencement exercises, and the session adjourned for a year.

During the time intervening before supper and after Meister's band entertained the visitors out on the green. Under every umbrageous tree groups of people sat, and drank in the melody evolved by Bridgeport's crack musical organization. At eight o'clock in the evening the Ossolian literary societies, composed of the young ladies attending college, gave a reception, on Pendleton Heights, to the students, their parents and friends. The fine old house was thrown wide open, but the weather was so delightful, that nearly all adjourned to the open air. The evening was delightfully spent in social intercourse, and vocal and instrumental selections were interspersed with refreshments. The reception kept up until a quite late hour, and was enjoyed by all present.

Bethany will bear a deeper aspect to-day. Where yesterday it was one of joy and gaiety, the absence of the young people will be decidedly felt by the faculty and the villagers. The former will soon go on their own vacation and the venerable halls will then be practically deserted until September, the beginning of the new term, arrives.

BEFORE THE COMMENCEMENT.

The Exercises Beginning Sunday—Literary and Athletic Exercises.

The exercises of the closing week, though finishing with yesterday's commencement exercises, began last Sunday morning. On that day, at 11 a. m., President McDiarmid delivered the baccalaureate sermon. Text: "We know subject of miracles. Text: 'We know that a teacher come from God, because no man can do these miracles that thou dost except God, be with him.'" John 11:2.

He opened by referring to the tendency even among Christians to minimize the value of the miracles of the New Testament, and to what scientists have been saying about the invariability of the laws of nature. He argued that miracles are not violations of the laws of nature, but simply the natural action of personal beings who are superior men. Admit that there are beings superior to men and it is certainly not hard to believe that such superior beings should perform deeds that, from the human standpoint, are miraculous. If there be a God it is easy to believe that he will perform deeds beyond the knowledge or powers of men. The New Testament view of miracles was presented in harmony with the spirit of the question of Paul, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" If God undertakes it the thing will be done. Even men can interfere with the natural working of things about them, much more can superior beings, much more can God. It was argued that miracles were to be expected in connection with a revelation from heaven, that a revelation is itself a miracle as certainly as the raising of the dead. Various authorities were quoted in support of the views presented. He closed with some warnings and exhortations to the graduating class as to their motives and conduct through life.

On Monday evening Prof. R. E. Snyder and his class gave a concert. The professor has been an excellent instructor, and much regret is expressed that he has resigned and will be with the college no more. Tuesday was the field day, and the following entertaining programme was rendered:

1. 100-yard dash—Gardner, Sapp, White and O. K. Muckley.
2. Throwing base ball—Cartwright, Adleman, Echols and Evans.
3. Throwing the hammer—O. P. Muckley and Wilson.
4. Standing broad jump—O. K. Muckley and Prescott.
5. Running broad jump—Sapp and Harvont.
6. 440-yard dash—Harvont, White, Muckley and Hanna.
7. Hop, step and jump—Moore, Muckley and Sapp.
8. Standing high jump—Sapp and Lea.
9. Hurdle race—Muckley and Hanna.
10. Flat men's race—Tarr and Keyes.
11. Race of war—Faculty and the Seniors.
12. Base ball game. Game called at three o'clock—Between Bethany and Beaver. Executive committee—Allen, Wilson, chairman. Base ball—H. O. Evans, E. S. Clark and B. Darsie. Foot ball—A. B. Craighead, I. W. Cunningham and O. P. Muckley. Tennis—W. D. Kimball, H. Gillespie and A. S. Moody.
Field day committee—S. O. McCarty, C. W. Pritchard, P. Johnson and W. H. Vady.
Field officers—H. O. Evans, secretary; J. Cartwright, timer; W. L. Cady, C. L. Adley and H. K. Vandoren.

The games were all hotly contested, and some very good records were made. In the evening the following interesting programme was gone through with at the closing exercises of the American literary society:

Music.....A. I. I. Song

Salutatory.....W. T. Groom, Ky.
Oration.....W. C. Frewitt, Ky.
Valedictory.....J. H. Miller, Ohio

THE TRUSTEES MEET.

A Handsome Donation—Two Resignations.

On Wednesday evening the trustees of Bethany College held the annual meeting with President McDiarmid in the chair. Financial Agent Harvint's report showed that the finances of the college were in excellent condition, the expenses last year aggregating $20,050, and the income having received $11,000. A gift of $5,000 was accepted from Mr. Thomas W. Phillips, of Newcastle, Pa. The interest on this sum is to be used in aiding students of the college studying for the ministry.

Rev. Frederick D. Power, of Washington, D. C., and Rev. John Campbell, of Canada, were elected members of the Board of Trustees. The resignations of Prof. Frank M. Dowling, of the chair of Latin, and Prof. Snyder, of the musical department, were accepted. Prof. Dowling will leave for Pomona, Cal., to enter the ministry. Prof. Eugene Feuchtinger, of Canton, O., has been selected to fill the vacancy caused by Prof. Snyder's resignation. A full department of music will be established and degrees conferred.

Next term the chair of Biblical literature, vacant since Prof. Trible's death, will be filled. The trustees have not yet fully decided whom to appoint.

The past scholastic year has been for Bethany a most successful one. More pupils were entered than ever before attended the studies during any one year. The trustees and the faculty look with confidence to the coming year.
